Galerie Charlot, Paris, will play host to a group show, titled 'Archeonauts', on view from April 27 through June 3, 2017.

The featured artists include Morehshin Allahyari, Quayola, Evan Roth, Eduardo Kac, Nicolas Maigret, Maria Roszkowska, Clément Renaud, Laurent Mignonneau and Christa Sommerer.

The neologism 'Archeonauts,' from which this exhibition draws its title, is a portmanteau conflating the root of archeology with a word meaning 'seafarers' in ancient Greek. The first component articulates a double meaning, that of antiquity (archaios) but also the act of ruling and dominating (archein), as Sigfried Zielinski has pointed out in his essay Deep Time of the Media, while the affix 'nautes' ideally refers to a repertoire of figures connected with the experience of travel, be it a journey across the Universe (Astronauts), through the seas that lie between the East and the West (Argonauts) or in the Cyberspace (Internauts).

The exhibition will be on view at Galerie Charlot, 47 rue Charlot 75003 Paris.
